PEER TUTORING AT CSI – The Learning Assistance Center

WHAT IS PEER TUTORING?
The intent of peer tutoring is to help students help themselves, or to assist or guide them to the point at which they become independent learners, and thus no longer need a tutor. Its primary goal is to assist with troublesome content areas and identify skills necessary to complete complex assignments. Tutors are available free to current CSI students on a drop-in basis. Just bring your student ID to check in. Tutors are available after January 30th and students are encouraged to utilize this assistance early on. Primary content areas for tutoring include Math, Writing, Computer Literacy Assistance, and Sciences.

LOCATION:
Peer Tutoring is located in the Learning Assistance Center, which is on the second floor of The Gerald Meyerhoeffer (Library) Building. Once you arrive on the second floor, go through the set of double doors, past the reception area, and through the second set of double doors. Within the Learning Assistance Center are tutors, study tables, computers and instructional videos and DVDs for various classes.

ADDITIONAL RESOURCES:
Many factors can contribute to the success of a student such as:
Understanding learning styles
Managing time
Test preparation
Reducing test anxiety

We Are Not Retreating-We Are Advancing in Another Direction

- General Douglas MacArthur

According to the VA, there are approximately 22.7 million veterans alive today. Only 4% of those are using educational benefits. From 2000 to 2009, the number of veterans and military members that are pursuing an undergraduate degree has dropped from 90,000 to 60,000. Veteran dropout rates are as high as 69% for those who are pursuing two and four-year degrees. A major contribution to this decline is difficulty transitioning. Transitioning to civilian life from a martial life is very difficult. Rank doesn’t matter anymore, you have to make new relationships, and you have to learn to self-regulate. People that do not understand the military lifestyle, think that this transition is easy. What they don’t realize is you’re drilled with paranoia, authority, camaraderie, and combat skills from day one when getting off that bus for boot camp. Well, how do we make this transition easier? Some of you were exposed to transitioning assistants programs before being discharged from your branch of service. Some were adequate and successful classes and some perhaps were an absolute waste of time. But no class would have prepared you for the difficulties socially, psychologically, and academically veterans have to face. The Veterans Club is working to make this transition easier. We are here to connect the bridge between faculty, support services, and veteran students, provide peer support and help with employment opportunities. Key things to succeeding in college that I found successful are:

- Organize your time. Get a calendar and write down when all your exams, quizzes, projects are due. Write when to begin studying for exams that are coming up. This is a great and simple tool to manage your time and get ahead of your school work.
- Attend club meetings, join other clubs or sports. The more you are exposed to the college environment and become proactive, the easier it will be for you socially.
- Don’t rush anything. The pace of adjustment should be at your comfort level. Everyone is different. There are some that adapt to civilian life quite well, others may need more time.
- Be upfront. The RAND study has shown that young students fresh out of high school may ask inappropriate questions regarding your service or war in general. Many of these students just don’t understand where you are coming from. So EDUCATE them by talking about your experiences if you are comfortable. Also be upfront with your teacher. I have had many veteran students who gave me a heads up on psychological issues such as PTSD or depression that may hinder their progress in class. If you let your instructor know, they will work with you! It is nothing to be ashamed of because what you tell that instructor will not negatively impact how they view you and it will be confidential. It will only help.
- Be a leader. Take leadership roles in class projects and organizations on campus. You have skills that many civilians cannot acquire. USE THEM!
- Don’t isolate yourself. Let your family know what’s going on, especially if you are feeling stress with school or just life. Come talk to me in my office if you need someone to talk to. Make use of CSI’s counseling services and support groups that the VA and Twin Falls can provide you. You are not alone, and that is a huge thing you need to understand. The Veterans Club and CSI are here to help you succeed.
- Control your response to change. Anxiety and depression are very common during transition phases between military and civilian life. The fact is, you can’t control the future or what is coming. You can prepare yourself and work on controlling how you respond to barriers you will face.
- Stress sucks. College is stressful. I didn’t have anxiety until I went to college. Exercise, yoga, sleep, eating right will help reduce stress. Your health is very important, so make sure you take care of yourself.
- Motivation. Motivation declines as the semester goes on. This is totally normal. However, keep your mind on the goal (getting a degree and a career)!

All in all, you can do this! The Veterans Club will continue meetings in January. We have many awesome things planned and have done a great job so far for being a new club. I want to thank you for your service and am proud of each and every one of you! Don’t change anything you have learned in the military, always cherish and utilize it.

Tuition is also due on Friday, January 20.
